

ThreeSixty Journalism's Word Search: Black History

History often seems to recede in the distance, like an image in a rearview mirror. But it is as close as your grandmother's stories about growing up on a farm or your classmate's memories of a refugee camp. It is as present as the old man at church who fought in Vietnam or the nurse whose family fled the terror of civil war in Liberia. In honor of Black History month, Twin Cities' teens share the stories of three African American elders who came to Minnesota as young adults from the Jim Crow South in ThreeSixty Journalism's Feb/March 2012 magazine issue.
